Good vintage

Just as we get over 1990s shoulder pads and flouro dresses, a whole new decade is about to be revived. From tomorrow, The Nineties Are Vintage, at Selfridges in London, will showcase the 1990s' most iconic moments. "The 1990s were a seminal time," says Linda Hewson, head of creative at the store.

"Remember all the amazing people and products that have shaped our views today." Working with the vintage stores Reelix and Beyond Retro, there will be fashion from Jean Paul Gaultier, Azredine Alaïa and Vivienne Westwood, alongside cult 1990s movies (Titanic), make-up (are to try your hand at Mac's Spice lipstick again?), music and magazines (should you wish to reminisce over some old issues of Interview). With DJs from Work II, the original 1990s night in Dalston, east London, on the decks, pop down for a blast from the Generation X past.

The Nineties Are Vintage, at Selfridges, W1, from tomorrow until January 29

Supergirls Linda Evangelista, Gaby Crawford, Naomi Campbell and Christy Turlington at the finale of the 1991 Versace catwalk show. On sale at The Nineties Are Vintage: Primal Scream CD, £8; Dazed CD, £7; Titanic DVD, £5; Jean Paul Gaultier perfume, £43; Mac Spice lipstick, £12; Vivienne Westwood vintage platform, £440

TREND WATCH SHEEPSKIN

In the depths of winter, anything less than a portable sleeping bag can seem like an invitation for frostbite. One solution is the luxe parka, but it's hardly a fashion statement. Luckily, London's scenesters have found a stylish solution. With cosy natural wool lining and a suede or leather biker outer layer, the flight jacket keeps your vitals toasty while maintaining your style edge. We adore Daisy Lowe's black leather number (left, from Christopher Kane), but if your budget doesn't quite stretch to £2,215, try Karen Millen or Toast. Whatever your choice, expect to invest; if you go for cheap sheepskin, you'll soon find yourself begging for that duvet coat again.

WHAT CYBERSPACE THINKS OF DAVINA MCCALL

Millymcmahon.blogspot.com

You look embarrassed, McCall, and so you should be. If we got caught short sagging out in a sparkly moo-moo, we'd be more inclined to pull it over our heads, snood-style, as opposed to this sack. The killer boots are dying to be sexed up with a minidress-and-stocking combo. Now go home and think about what you've done.

Kaiser at Celebitchy.com

If you're going to wear a glittery potato sack, why go with grey? The most unfortunate thing is that the shoulder pads appear to have slipped forward, which is horrid. It's cut so poorly, I can only focus on her ugly oversized boots.

Every part of this outfit is a fail.

BETTER THAN SPECS

Clear-lens glasses, those geek-chic staples, have hit the mainstream. Even Britney has been seen in some. For the authentic look, check out Prism's hand-carved frames, a firm favourite of Julia Restoin-Roitfeld.

Theverysimong.blogspot.com

While the draped metallic dress is very on trend (well done, Davs), the length just doesn't work with such baggy knee boots. The overall effect is superfrump. She should have sexed it all up with a hot little heel or shoe-boot.
