6 VERY FEW OF US TREAT SPECS as a proper accessory. In fact, while most of you will be saving up for a new-season handbag and boots, we bet you're still wearing glasses you got back when your mum was paying for them. Well, sort it out! No one is looking at your handbag when they're talking to you, so for those of us not blessed with 20/20 vision (and, of course, those who are but just want to look cool), it's time to start investing in the perfect frames. Thanks to fashion writer Anna Laub, we've found them with her cult label, Prism. 'I had money to spend but the perfect glasses I envisaged just weren't out there,' she told us. 'There was a gap in the market for glasses from a fashion accessory perspective, rather than something simply functional.' Anna tried different shapes and designs on 50 of her fashionable friends before choosing the best five styles. 'I think larger frames suit most people's face shape the best.' Which is a good thing as big frames are the only glasses to be seen in now, as picked up on by Amber Le Bon and 90210's Shenae Grimes. But forget the Deirdre Barlow connotations – big specs by Prism, ZanZan and Cutler & Gross prove that size really does matter!
